

Arzoo Syeddah(Cohort 1): Teaching Assistant, IUG

Doing the joint DBA by IUG and Plymouth University has been a fantastic experience for me. It provides professionals to attain a UK degree in Geneva's multicultural setting and expand their academic boundaries. The constructive and engaging role of the mentoring programme at IUG is very valuable. The teaching methods encourage critical and creative thinking, where continuous lively interaction between students and teacher fosters a productive learning space.

Kosmos Alasoka(Cohort 1): Public Information Officer, World Meteorological Organization

My experience as a DPA student of the Plymouth University/IUG since 2011 has been incredibly remarkable. The professors are friendly and ever-cooperative in teaching and providing much valued feedback to the students. The six module structure provided by the Universities, is suitable for the rigorous standard of modern doctorate learning.

Kujtime Ademi, (Cohort 2): Teaching Assistant, University of Zagreb

The joint doctorate has been an enriching experience for someone like me who has been working in academia the past 4 years. The modules are challenging- focusing on different theoretical, reflective and reflexive approaches- giving me the option to pursue a career in international business in the future.

Mirabelle Fi (Cohort 5): Owner of EyezChina Consulting

I am a market research consultant who started her own company in China. Doing this joint doctorate program by IUG and Plymouth, has been one of the best choices I have made in my career development. This academic endeavor will not only extend my professional knowledge in how I carry out research, but also deepen my understanding within my research topic.

Seck Ndiogou (Cohort 5): Technical Officer at Roll Back Malaria, World Health Organization

The DBA offered by Plymouth university and IUG is a great opportunity for working professionals like me to expand their professional development and educational horizons. The long distance doctorate based in Geneva is interactive yet demanding, preparing individuals to be future business and public policy leaders, and face the unique business and public policy challenges of today.